Description: The Extraordinaires are over the top characters with extraordinary needs. In this class, it will be your job to design the objects they need to fit their worlds. You will be introduced to the world of design, learning the foundations of design in a fun and engaging way. Your clients are The Extraordinaires and it's the job of EAGLE students to design the inventions they require to fit their worlds. Our clients range from a rap star to an evil genius. With each client, we will learn more about them, their world and their needs. Then we will each individually design the product they desire. It could be a communications device for a soldier or a drink carrier for a circus acrobat. And we will learn that a good designer always asks lots of questions. Pick a Think Card to guide you through the 3-step design process to Research, Design and Improve. Could your object be made portable? Larger? Could it be made with more sustainable materials? Using the Think Cards helps develop design-thinking skills which are essential in the 21st Century. With over 200 design combinations, you will be able to bring home your studio kit to finish working for more clients once our 10 weeks is up. And no need think you should be a good artist or good reader to participate. Good design is all about great ideas! Mrs. Stacey will be our guide as we tackle each challenge. Students will each receive a design station with materials for both in class use and to take home after the semester.

*Mr. Dixon is a musician and music teacher. He has been recording and performing music professionally for more than 20 years and has enjoyed teaching music for just about as long. He has had the opportunity to work with Jonathan Singleton (singer/songwriter) and Tucker Beathard (Big Machine recording artist) where they would open concerts for such country music artists as Dierks Bentley, Darius Rucker, and Thomas Rhett. He attended NEMCC in their music program and was the guitar and bass guitar player for the school's Campus Country band. He has had the pleasure of teaching and discussing guitar and music theory to countless students throughout his career and considers that a most fun and rewarding musical endeavor. He is now assisting in leading worship every Sunday morning at Northside Orchard Church in Baldwin, MS, and Crosswind Ministries in Corinth, MS, on Sunday evenings. He also currently has 18-20 guitar, bass guitar, and drum students that he offers private lessons to on a weekly basis.
